THE BEST OF ALL THE DEAR OLD SONGS.

The songs they sing, the songs they sing, Those half remembered memories of ours! How the hours with merry rhythm ring With all the world of dreamland clothed with flowers! Sweet melody, the singing of the old time seythe, Sent whispering through the grass by mower blithe, But best of all the dear old songs to wear Are the songs that came from grandma's rock-ing chair.

I half remember of an old time spring How clear the robin's first call seemed to ring, And how the snow in merry, singing way, With feathery flakes made white the barren

And how the brook went whispering through

And how the brook went whispers, the dell, the dell, Singing words no tongue may ever tell. Singing words no tongue may ever tell. Those idle afternoons, those happy days, When I was but a boy with boylsh ways; But, looking back, the best of all to wear Are the songs that came from grandma's rocking chair.

They are dear songs, the songs they sing,
Those half remembered memories of ours.
They make the air with merry cadence ring
And crown the time king with a wreath of flowers.

The dreams of winter and the dreams of spring Make music sweet of half the songs they sing. From lazy days, those days of idle joys, When boyish like I dreamed the dreams of boys, But best of all the dear old songs to wear Are the grandma songs from grandma's rocking chair.

TWO TRAMPS.

A young fellow was swinging along up the dusty road whistling in a way that made the robins cock their heads to listen. He was a good looking young fellow, with dark curly hair and a fine bronzed complexion. His clothes were coarse and stout, he wore a slouch turned down all around, and from hat to shoes he was gray with dust. He bore a stout stick in his hand and walked with a light, springy step, whistling gayly as he advanced.

He had just reached the brow of the hill when a peculiar sight drew his attention. To the right at some distance stood a pretty white cottage with budding maples all about it. It was so neat and cozy that the young man would have paused to look at it if there had been no other attraction. Something else did attract him, however, something which quickened his pace to a Standing on the steps of the porch was a gray haired lady, and facing her from the walk below stood a defiant specimen of the genus tramp. Behind the old lady in the doorway was a young woman with a fire shovel in her hand. As the young man correct the hand. As the young man opened the gate he heard a volley of oaths from the tramp, coupled with an emphatic de-mand for food. From this the gray haired lady shrank back, and the ruffian sprang up the steps, and, pushing her aside, attempted to enter the door.

"Hold on, there!" cried the young man from the graveled pathway. The tramp turned and saw him coming.

"Wot's that?" he snarled.

With one more bound the young man was on the porch, panting slightly, but ready for action.

"Has he annoyed you, ma'am?" he cried, and his hat came off as he spoke.
"Yes," said the gray haired lady in a trembling voice. "He said we must get him some breakfast and give him some money." The tramp stood in a defiant attitude, his sullen eyes regarding the young man with an ugly stare. As the youth turned from the lady, the ruffian glared at him from head to toe. "Say," he g

"Say," he growled, "you ain't a-workin this side o' the street, too, be you?"

"Come, now," said the young man quietly, "you climb off the porch and chase yourself down the road. Vamoose!

He made a sudden move toward the fellow, who backed quickly down the steps. There he paused and delivered another volley of profanity.

"Come down here," he shouted, "an we'll fight to see who runs this ranch."

"I'm coming," said the youth, and he flung his hat on the porch and followed it with his coat. Then he turned to the women and said, "Ladies, have the kindness to retire within the house

Then he leaped from the porch and the battle royal began. It was not a fight for poets to sing. It was a struggle between blind force on one side and skilled agility on the other. It didn't last long, but the young man was dimly conscious that one time in the fight, when the big fellow was crowding him pretty hard, the young girl stood close at hand with the fire shovel poised in a decidedly threatening way. Finally an adroit blow sent the ruffian to grass, and when he got up he limped down the pathway and through the gate, es-corted by the young man, and so disap-

When the deliverer came back for his hat and coat, the old lady met him with profuse thanks, and the young lady smiled at him in a most charming way. Was there anything he wanted—breakfast, a glass of milk? He said he would like a glass of water, and the young lady swiftly brought it. As the young man took it from her hands he permitted himself to be instantly convinced that she was decidedly pretty-a slender young woman in a cheap dress of dark material, with a big blue apron over it, and a white cap concealing her dark hair. But her face was bright and rosy, and when she said, "Will you have another?" the youth was quite sure he had never heard a more musical voice. As he picked up his hat the gray haired lady said: "Would you like to earn a little money, my good young man?"

"Why, yes, I would," the young man admitted.

"Then," said the older lady, "per-haps you could beat a few rugs and a small carpet for us?"

The young man looked at the pretty girl and said he thought he could.

"It's just this way," said the older lady: "Our hired girl has been called home by a sick mother, and our hired man sprained his wrist so badly in trying to stop a runaway horse that he's gone into town to have it dootored, and so Stella and I are left alone to finish up the housecleaning. But if you'll clean the rugs it will be a great help to us. Stella will show you where every-

And so under Stella's guidance the clothesline was put up, and the rugs were brought out, and pretty soon the sound of a stout stick well applied was heard. Every time the young man paused he looked toward the young girl, who, with her skirts tucked up, was flitting in and out of the doorway or pausing—a very pretty picture in-deed—on the top step of the vine covered porch. She was a demure girl, the young man noted, and not inclined to talk to the help, but once in awhile when he chanced to catch her eye he fancied he detected a most mischievous twinkle. After awhile she came toward

"I don't believe you ever beat any rugs before," she said. "And why not?" he cried.

"Because you work too hard at it,"

she laughed. "Well, to tell you the truth," he said, "I'm working hard in hopes that your mother will give me a little luncheon. I'm hungrier than a starved bear."

"I'll see what mother thinks about it," she said and ran into the house. Then the older lady came forth and carefully inspected the rugs. "You do your work very conscien-tiously," she said.

"I try to, ma'am," he remarked. She looked at him curiously.

"it's a pity to see such a fine young man tramping," she said. "Why don't you give it up?" "I'm thinking of it, ma'am," he an-

"A sober, industrious man like you," she continued, "should marry and settle

"I'm thinking of that, too, ma'am," he said, and somehow he looked toward Stella as he said it, and Stella, who was in the doorway, caught his glance and cried abruptly:
"Your luncheon is ready."

The young man soused his head in a tin wash basin a few times and then pronounced himself also ready.

It was a nice midday spread, and Stella waited on him. As his eye took in the details of the painfully clean kitchen he suddenly cried out:

"Do you ride a wheel?"
"Why, yes," she answered calmly.
'Den't you?"

He stopped short and sipped at his glass of milk.

"A tramp on a bicycle! Ha, ha!"

laughed, but it was a forced laugh.

After luncheon the young man announced that he was obliged to go to town, but he would come back at o'clock that afternoon, and perhaps he could be of further service. The older

'Keep it for me until I get back from town," he said. 'I never have any money in my pocket without wanting to spend it."

'Poor young man!" said Stella's mother.

Then with lifted hat the poor young man strode down the path and vanished behind the hedge that bordered tho

"I wonder if he will ever come back?" quoth Stella's mother. "Yes, he'll come back," said Stella.

It was nearly 5 o'clock that afternoon when a natty young man in an exceedingly becoming bicycle suit came wheeling down the road from Centerville. Presently he was aware that a rider was approaching, a rider in a charming gray suit and hat and with the daintiest russet shoes. He turned aside to give the newcomer the best of the road when a merry voice cried out:

"Coming back for your money?" He stared around in astonishment. "Why, it's Stella!" he cried. "I beg your pardon, Miss''-

"Stella Gorham," she called as she turned about and pedaled to his side.
"I am John Trenholm," he said,

"the treasurer of the new Centerville mills. "Yes," she said demurely, "I could have told you that."

"You knew me?"
"I guessed it. I knew you were coming to Centerville, and I had heard of you before. Your sister and I were at Wellesley together. Why, Mabel gave me one of your photographs—there, I have left been told you that." shouldn't have told you that."
"Why," he said, "I've heard of you too. Valedictorian of your class, pride

"There, there," said Stella, "that will be quite sufficient." She pushed her wheel ahead and left him a little

"Do you know," she said as he caught up, "mother will almost die from mortification."

"Not if she pays me what she owes," laughed the youth. Then he added, with a mischievous glance at the girl, "I am going to try and coax another meal out of her."

"I've attended to that," said Stella. And so side by side they rode down the road and up the pathway to the cot-tage.—Cleveland Plain Dealer,

An Impression

"Did that lawyer get a clear view of the case?" inquired the litigant's friend. "No, I'm afraid he didn't. I told him that my trouble was about money, and he seemed to be proceeding on the theory that by relieving me of my money he would cause the trouble to disappar."-Washington Star.

I,ove is the keystone of a woman's life. Her fondest hopes rest upon this tender cunotion; her highest pride is in her capacity to awaken the love which makes a happy wife; her noblest ambition is to become a loved and loving mother.

Any weakness or disease which incapacitates her to fulfill the exalted function of motherhood is the saddest blight which can come upon a woman's life.

But there is no reason in nature why any man's life.

But there is no reason in nature why any hindrances or derangements of this kind should continue to exist. Ninety-nine times in a hundred they are completely overcome in a perfectly natural and scientific way by the use of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, which gives healthy power and capacity to the special organs; reinforces the nerve-centres and makes natural, healthy motherhood possible, safe and comparatively easy.

It makes the coming of baby almost free from pain; gives strength and cheerfulness to the mother, and constitutional vigor to the child. It is the only medicine in the world devised for this one purpose by an educated physician, a skilled and experienced specialist in this particular field of practice.

"I cannot say enough in praise of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescriptiou, as it has done me a world of good, and has, undoubtedly saved my life," writes Mrs, Florence Hunter, of Corley, Logan Co., Ark. "I miscarried four times; could get no medicine to do me any good. I concluded to try the 'Favorite Prescription' and after taking several bottles of it I made my husband a present of a fine girl. I think it is the best medicine in the world."

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets: One is a laxative, two a mild cathartic.

During one of the naval engagements of the late war a sailor by the name of John Davis performed an act of bravery that has rarely been equaled. While the battle was at its height a shell entered the Valley City, of which ship Davis was gunner's mate, and exploded on the berth deck, setting it on fire. Captain Chaplin, the commander of the vessel, jumped down into the magazine, and while directing his men to extinguish the flames passed up with his own hands the loose cylinders of powder. The fireworks on board became ignited. Rockets whizzed and blue 6-room lights blazed up in the very midst of the ammunition. The shellroom caught $1,100. fire, and it seemed as if the Valley City must be blown to pieces.

John Davis, appreciating the danger and desirous of doing all in his power to avert it, jumped up on an open barrel of gunpowder and sat down on the head, covering it with his person as well as he could to protect it from the showering sparks.

Captain Chaplin, seeing him quietly seated while everybody else was at work, ordered him in peremptory tones to 'get down and help put out the fire. The young gunner's mate staid where he was and replied calmly:

"Don't you see, sir, I can't, for if I do the sparks will fall into the powder. If I get down, captain, we shall all go Netwithstanding the terrible danger, Captain Chaplin could not repress a smile, and Davis' heroic action was rewarded after the battle by immediate promotion. - Youth's Companion.

I must at once discriminate between the bookseller and the publisher, as it is the former with whom I have to do on the present occasion. There was not always a distinction between the one and the other, as the Lintots, the Curlls and the Tonsons, though they designated themselves booksellers, were at the same time publishers, and it was only in the early years of the present century that booksellers who published books ceased to style themselves booksellers. The bookseller of today is to be regarded as a book distributer and not as a book producer. It has become a fashion in some quarters to belittle his occupation and not afford him the place which he should occupy in the commonwealth of letters. That he has an important place to fill and that he seeks to fill it with all his faculties, I hold. That there are booksellers and booksellers I will at once freely admit, and to those who have entered a profession for which they have neither ability nor qualifications I give but scant courtesy .- Acad-

Chinese Sweets.

The Chinese are said to possess secrets in the preparation of sweets that astonish our most accomplished confectioners. They know how to remove the pulp from oranges and substitute various jellies. The closest examination fails to reveal any opening or incision in the skin of the fruit. They perform the same feat with eggs. The shells are apparently as intact as when the eggs were newly laid, but upon breaking and opening them the contents consist of nuts and sweetmeats.-New York Sun.
